

April Garner Davis

World Community Magazine & WCM Live Bio

April Garner Davis is a nonprofit and community engagement leader with extensive experience in program development, strategic partnerships, board governance, youth development, and community outreach. Her work is rooted in connecting people to information, resources, and opportunities that strengthen individuals, families, and communities.

April serves as co-host of WCM Live, the weekly online community news show of World Community Magazine. Through WCM Live, she helps create meaningful conversations designed to inform, educate, and connect the community. Each week, the program explores topics ranging from local events and community happenings to politics, medicine and health, history and culture, entrepreneurship, government, education, and literacy. The show also provides a platform to spotlight local entrepreneurs, community leaders, organizations, and individuals whose work is making a difference.

Beyond the weekly broadcast, April's commitment to community impact includes nonprofit board service, youth programming, career readiness, literacy initiatives, leadership development, and volunteerism. Through both her professional work and WCM Live, she is committed to ensuring that community voices are heard, important information is shared, and people are connected to resources and opportunities that empower them to thrive.
